Pronouns: she, her, hers

Cheryl Johnson-Hartwell has successfully litigated over 800 disputes to conclusion. She has significant experience in federal and state court, with arbitration panels, and before federal and state administrative agencies. Cheryl provides clients with proactive strategies to manage litigation risk. She endeavors to obtain an early and cost-effective resolution for disputes and typically resolves them at or before the summary judgment phase. In those cases that proceed further, she has a record of obtaining favorable results for her clients.

She also counsels employers on matters involving hiring, discipline and termination, and workplace policies. Her clients include automotive manufacturers, large-format retail, non-profit entities, security services, entertainment, manufacturing, furniture retail, and public-sector employers.

Cheryl is an Association of Workplace Investigators (AWI) Certificate Holder. She conducts workplace investigations as a neutral fact-finder. Employers rely on her findings in order to make informed decisions on how to resolve internal workplace complaints.
