Frances Agoncillo is in Burke's Litigation Practice Group. She holds a Juris Doctorate from Southwestern Law School's two-year accelerated J.D. Program with a Civil Litigation concentration. During her time in law school, Frances earned a Public Service Distinction through her involvement in Southwestern Law School's Small Claims Clinic, and her externships with Los Angeles County Office of the County Counsel, and the licensing division of the California Department of Justice.

Prior to joining Burke, Frances worked as an associate for an established Los Angeles law firm where she represented various entities in a range of matters, including general liability matters, landlord-tenant matters, and premises liability matters, through every step of the litigation.

Outside of the office, Frances enjoys singing karaoke, taking a hot yoga or strength training class, and spending time with her family and friends.
